

DAILY PLANET

ALL THE NEWS THAT FITS

Tuesday, April 15

1997

NASA to Decide Friday On MSL Mission Reflight

A final decision on reflighting the Microgravity Science Laboratory (MSL) mission will be made Friday, according to NASA Shuttle Program Manager Tommy Holloway. "The Shuttle manifest for the remainder of the year, while tight, appears able to accommodate a reflight of Columbia and its MSL payload in early July," said Holloway. Last week's STS-83 mission had to be shortened from 16 days to four because of a problem with one of the Shuttle's fuel cells. Despite an abbreviated time in orbit, several MSL science teams were able to conduct some key experiment runs on board Columbia.

---

Job Search
Skills Seminar
8 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Wed. in Bldg.
4723, Room
116; Contact:
Career Center,
4-2400

---

Tuesday is Last Day for MMA College Scholarship Applications

Tuesday is the deadline for submitting applications for college scholarships to be awarded by the Marshall Management Association (MMA). Two $1,500 scholarships will be awarded to children of Marshall employees or retirees. One will go to a student pursuing a scientific or technical degree, and one will go to a student pursuing a business, administration, education or art degree. Applications may be picked up in Bldg. 4250, Room 31. Contact: MMA, 4-3221.